ERGOT—Infestation of Grain

By D.A. Three Hills, Alta.

Ergot infestation in grain has been increasing in recent years. It is especially evident in rye crops. It also infects grasses, in-cluding brome grass, couch grass and the wheat grasses. Wheat and barley are also susceptible. Some barley fields, on stubble, were badly infested this year. Inquiries regarding feeding live-stock with barley containing ergot makes it necessary to men-tion the danger of feeding grain containing ergot.

Grain is designated as "ergot" when it contains more than 0.3% by weight of the ergot bodies. The reason for making this per-centage so low is because ergot contains toxins which are poi-sonous to both humans and livestock. Continuous feeding of grain with small amounts of ergot will affect the blood vessels. It will also cause a restriction of milk flow in dairy cows and in severe cases abortion. Bread made from grain containing ergot has caused death and serious illness.

Ergot is conspicuous in ripe grain, both in the standing crop and in the threshed grain. The large purplish-black, horn-like bodies grow on the heads of grain in the place of normal kernels. These ergot bodies contain winter spores and fungus starch. These may fall on the ground or be stored with threshed grain and re-main dormant through the winter.

Under warm, moist conditions in the spring, provided they are not buried below two inches in the ground, the ergot will grow and produce spores. These are carried to grasses or grains which are susceptible. The ergot spores can only attack grasses and grains when they are in the flowering stage. The spores make entry through the flower. The fungus growth destroys the kernel and secretes a sugary liquid which is attractive to insects. This is called the "honeydew" stage. Summer spores are contained in this secretion and are carried by insects to the flowering heads of other grasses and grains. This results in a rapid spread of the infection, such as has occurred in some fields the past season.

Some of the larger ergot bodies can be separated from grain in a suitable screen cleaning equip-ment. Local tests have failed to get the ergot out of barley. There are always broken pieces, the same size as the grain, which will not come out in a cleaning pro-cess. When this quantity is over 0.3% the grain is not safe to feed to livestock.

Crop rotation is one of the best methods of controlling ergot. The ergot bodies normally do not re-main capable of reproduction more than one year. Good seed, free from impurities and disease, always pays. Susceptible grasses on road allowances or in pasture adjacent to the grain crop should be cut before it reaches the flow-ering stage. This will prevent the spread of the ergot spores from the grass to the grain. Stub-bled land from which ergot grain has been harvested, should be worked to a depth of at least four inches. Ergot bodies buried to a sufficient depth will be unable to germinate. Where there is an in-festation of ergot in the soil re-sistant or immune crops should be grown.

DISPOSAL AND USE OF SCREENINGS

By W. S. BACKMAN

Field Supervisor

M.D. of Kneeshill, No. 45

"Storage and Disposal of Screenings" is the heading of a new poster now on display in all grain elevators. It points out the regulations now in force concern-ing the movement of screenings within the Province of Alberta.

All weed seeds and screenings stored, moved, sold or otherwise disposed of shall be handled in accordance with the provisions of the Noxious Weeds Act. The regulations are as follows:

1. No screenings shall be used as feed for livestock unless fed within an enclosed feed lot approved by a Weed Inspector.
2. A permit to transport screen-ings must be obtained from a Weed Inspector, Municipal Field Supervisor or the Field Crops Branch, Edmonton, be-fore screenings can be moved.
3. No screenings shall be moved except in tight containers which will prevent any scatter-ing of seeds in transit.
4. Every person who has screen-ings in his possession or under his control shall keep them in buildings, bin or other con-tainers so constructed that screenings are securely con-tained therein.

The Field Crops Commissioner, Field Supervisor, or representa-tive of the Field Crops Branch, to whom an application is made, may issue a permit in writing, authorizing the applicant to move or transport screenings in accor-dance with the terms of the permit. The person issuing the permit must be satisfied that the screen-ings will be confined during transit in tightly closed containers of a type which will not permit the escape of any of the screen-ings.

A permit to feed screenings can only be issued where the screen-ings are to be fed within an en-closed feed lot. If you are feed-ing screenings, make sure that they are fed in such a way that they will not get the chance to grow again.

Regulations controlling storage and dispositions of screenings are for the protection of all and own-ers and operators. In following them closely there will be fewer weeds to pollute the fields and roadsides next summer. Careless handling of weed seeds and screenings has been responsible for the wide spread of many nox-ious weeds and the introduction of new weeds from other prov-inces. The Noxious Weeds Act provides that all weed seeds and screenings stored, moved, sold or otherwise disposed of shall be handled safely. These regulations should be followed carefully.

Middle East Debt to Britain

Much is being made of Britain's faults in anti-British publications in the United States and countries behind the Iron Curtain of Soviet domination. British colonial policy over the past years is pictured as cruel and selfish, which is a deliberate misrepresentation. Whatever faults individual governors of British colonies have been guilty of in past decades, the policy of Britain has been beneficial to the backward countries it has ruled.

British policy has been one of gradual preparation for self-government of native peoples wherever the flag has been flown. That is why India received her independence, why the great dominions of the Commonwealth have been created out of former colonies. The same thing is true in the Middle East, where British industry, engineering skill and governmental genius has had sway.

Today Persia, known as Iran, is taking advantage of the difficulties under which Britain is laboring, by claiming her right to her national resources. While such a claim is within the national rights of Iran, it should not be forgotten by critics of British policy that Iran owes a tremendous debt to Britain for the development of these latent resources. Iran could not and never would develop them alone.

Another country that owes Britain a great debt of gratitude is Egypt. It was under British approval and help that Egypt won her liberation from the enslavement of the Turkish empire, and since that day it has been British wealth and engineering enterprise that has developed Egypt's independence. If the Sudan today is a prize for Egypt to covet, it is because British gold, blood and labor has made of a desert country a prosperous and contented people.

Monuments to British colonial policy and its great benefits are there for the world to see. In the Sudan at the Upper Nile town of Assuan, where the great Assuan dam is located. Built by British engineers and completed in 1902 at a cost of 25,560-million dollars, this dam, with its capacity of 2,420-million cubic metres, holds the waters of the Upper Nile back until flood time comes round when vast territories of barren land are made fruitful by its 180 sluice gates being opened.

Well might the greedy and inefficient Egyptian government covet control of the Sudan. But the Sudanese themselves, who finally ended their hatred of Britain at the Battle of Atbara in 1898, when Lord Kitchener revenged the murder of General Gordon by the Dervishes, are opposed to the Egyptian rule and enjoy the prosperity of British rule, which will soon end, they know, in self-government and nationhood.

What Is Free Enterprise?

The Alberta Wheat Pool, in their November 9th news budget, pans the Canadian Chamber of Commerce on its preaching for continuance of "free enterprise" in Canada. It suggests the Chamber give the people of Canada a clear definition of free enterprise. Whether one agrees with the Wheat Pool's arguments or not, points raised do merit serious thought.

Does free enterprise mean that the match manufacturers, the bakers, the glass companies, optical manufacturers, and other such people are justified in getting together to maintain monopoly prices?

Does it mean the manufacturer can fix the retail price for his product and compel a local merchant to sell his goods not below such a level, with a penalty of non-supply if such a price is not maintained?

Does it mean that a professional man in one Canadian province cannot practice in another without paying an exorbitant fee and undergoing another examination?

Does it mean that Canadian cotton goods manufacturers, for instance, must have high tariff protection in order to stay in business?

Does it mean that the Canadian branch of an American automobile manufacturing company must obtain a higher price for a product manufactured in Windsor, Ontario, than is obtained by the same company for a product manufactured across the river in Detroit?

Wasn't it Socrates who used to insist on his opponents in debate "defining their terms?"

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce certainly should give an explicit definition of what it means by "free enterprise."

Churchill's Heavy Task

The new British government, headed by Winston Churchill, has stepped into one of the most difficult positions to confront any government. Its task is all the more difficult because of the fact that its over-all majority in parliament is only a little bigger than that the former Labor government had. There are things to be accomplished that only a determined and strong government can do. Some things will have to be dealt with more tenderly than a government with a big majority would need to demonstrate.

Some idea of the problems before the Churchill cabinet may be gathered from a survey of the headlines in the daily press. They include such statements as: Narrow Churchill Majority Leaves Britain Uncertain; Churchill Victory Demands Care in U.K. Relation With U.S.; British Division Sails For Middle East; Iran Dispute to Come Before U.N.—and, if these are not enough, a glimpse at the internal difficulties in British national life should convince everyone that Churchill has taken over a tremendously heavy task.

More Hatching Eggs Needed

The demand in Alberta for baby chicks this past season far exceeded the supply and it looks as though the 1952 spring hatching season will bring even greater demands. There is a shortage of Alberta-produced hatching eggs, and in spite of high commercial egg price producers can get still higher returns from their eggs by producing hatching eggs.

According to F. J. Higginson, Acting Poultry Commissioner for Alberta, more producers with high quality flocks should consider getting them approved. Requirements consist mainly of efficient management and differ very little from practices that should be followed by all egg producers.

Alberta needs more hatching eggs—and Alberta farmers and poultrymen should produce them.

A Power in Everyday Life

All of us have heard, from time to time, that soldiers and sailors, in the face of death in the service of their country, have meekly turned to God, seeking help from their Creator in the hour of their agonizing need.

Many of these men have not been actively connected with religious organizations. Obviously, so far as they were concerned, the church meant little or nothing. Apparently, there is an opportunity for church leaders to do a little thinking on their own on the why of this attitude.

Why should an individual have to face death and suffering to experience the power of salvation? Plainly, because no one has made plain to him, or her, the full meaning of religion as a source of constant power in everyday living.

The Bible Today:

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void and darkness covered the face of the deep.—Genesis 1, 1 and 2.

Note and Comment

A unique tribute paid to Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip by the Fourth Estate is the Royal Visit issue of the Sapperton (B.C.) Review. Two pages—front and back—are printed in Royal Purple ink and a special message inset in gold. We think Publisher Wm. McCafferty should mail a copy of his paper to Clarence House.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has just received a 20-page letter in which the writer went into a long dissertation on the relationship between crime and the seasons of the year.

The writer said he knew Mr. Hoover would appreciate knowing of his theories on crime.

"You may not be able to find the time to reply to me," he wrote, "but you will continue to hear from me because I have nothing else to do in this place."

The return address was that of Washington's largest mental institution.

PANS OFFICIALDOM

Dear Sir—I have just reached the Pacific Coast after a trip from Ottawa during which I followed in the footsteps of Their Royal Highnesses, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip. I remained in most of the principal cities of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia just long enough, and met sufficient persons in trying to do a public relations job (I travelled everywhere by air), that I could reach at least a surface conclusion about the immediate reaction to the Royal Visit.

Everywhere it was the same story: criticism about officialdom monopolizing the attention of the two Royal visitors to such an extent that the general public was 'lucky' to catch a glimpse of the heir to the throne and her consort. If a lieutenant-governor or some other official did not have his face obscuring the view, his wife did. The official car travelled at such speed the thousands who lined the streets—often for hours—would have had as much chance of "getting acquainted" with the appearance of royalty as if their automobile had been jet powered. If Their Royal Highnesses, on return to England have any criticism about the generosity of applause they should take it to consideration—that the average man was not given an opportunity to work up much enthusiasm.

I tell you this because while I was in Edmonton your "open" letter to the Princess was drawn to my attention. I wished you to know that conditions of which you complained were not peculiar to the Alberta capital.

Your letter expressed the opinion of the less articulate subjects of His Majesty.

I admire your courage for saying what should be said. This is not criticism of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip but of the red tape and official desire for cudos which we, as democratic Canadians had, up to now, thought was at a minimum in our country.

PREFERRED RISKS

Dear Sir—Why doesn't some insurance company in Canada sell auto insurance policies only to non-drinking teetotaler drivers? The rate for sober drivers should be half that for drunks. Why should I have to pay for drinking drivers' accidents?

NON-DRINKER.

INFLATION'S TARGET

Dear Sir—Being that wages, taxes and even bus fares and all other living costs are being raised, how about similar raises for distressed veterans and widows? Nearly all government employees get good wages, wage increases and cost-of-living bonus. Well, how about it, Government leaders?

SAYS WE'RE RIGHT

Dear Sir—I have read Mr. Pue's letter to Princess Elizabeth about the Royal tour, and I think the same about it as you do. I read the Legal Record every week and like it fine. I am sure there are a lot more who feel the same about things as you do. I am a veteran, served overseas and know the whole story.

REQUEST FROM IOWA

Dear Sir—Would you please send me a copy of your letter to Princess Elizabeth in The Edmonton Sun Oct. 29. I read it in a copy sent to a friend here, and consider it a masterpiece. Although born in Michigan, my parents were Canadians and I guess quite some Canadian blood seeps through my veins.

Dear Sir—I would like to say that Mr. Pue's open letter to Princess Elizabeth is the best piece he has ever written. This letter should have greater circulation than even your own papers can give it.

PIONEERS TO COMPILE AN EARLY FAMILY HISTORY OF PROVINCE

Closely linked with the history of Southern Alberta are the names of a host of pioneer families that are gradually fading into oblivion along with the horse and buggy.

These families settled in the West long before railroads made their appearance, when there were as many Indians as there were settlers and none had an inkling of the wealth in natural resources that lay hidden under the rolling prairies. And their names have never been set down in official records.

It's quite likely they never would have been, either, if the Southern Alberta Pioneer and Old Timers Association at the annual meeting a year ago had not decided that something should be done before all chances of obtaining the old timers' records had disappeared.

It was with the idea of evolving a plan to collect this history up to and including the year 1890 that Douglas Hardwick, himself a pioneer, was persuaded to become president of the association for the present year.

With this major objective in mind, a committee was set up which developed a plan for gathering together this history.

The mechanics of this plan are simple: just one member of each pioneer family must fill out a special questionnaire form and send it to the director of the nearest district. The aforementioned forms may be obtained at the larger post offices in Southern Alberta, local old-timers' associations, or by writing any director.

But the problem of finding relatives and descendants of these pioneer families is the difficult part.

The form is primarily interested in all data prior to and including, 1890 as pertaining to the "pioneer period."

In an effort to gather the records of these pioneer families in Southern Alberta, which district extends from Red Deer south to the U.S. border, a central research committee was formed by the Southern Alberta Pioneer and Old Timers Association, under the chairmanship of Mr. Hardwick. Included in the committee are Miss Mary Pinkham, O.B.E.; J. E. A. MacLeod, K.C.; Alex McTavish; W. J. Wilde, and honorary secretary, Leishman McNeill.

They will be helped by a group of 22 well-known directors, each responsible for a district and for its local organization. Mr. Hardwick wishes it made perfectly clear that the forms, when completed, should be sent to the director of the nearest district, not the nearest director.

The history of each pioneer family will be woven, year by year, into the contemporary history of the country. When completed, it is hoped that copies will be placed in local museums, principal colleges and public libraries where they will be easily accessible for reference to present and future generations wishing to know the past connection of their families with the building of their country.

These histories and records will not be used for any commercial purposes whatever, and if ever published will be available to all at cost price.

The committee hopes that all will assist in this voluntary effort to save the fast-disappearing record of the past, and that no pioneer family of Southern Alberta will allow its name and history to be missed by failure to secure and send in a form.

New Booklet Stresses Importance Of Forests

The importance of Alberta's forests is the theme of a new illustrated booklet, "Alberta Forests," prepared by the Department of Lands and Forests and the Publicity Branch of the Department of Economic Affairs.

In a forward the Minister of Lands and Forests appeals to all citizens to prevent forest fires and maintain Alberta's forested areas as a source of timber and a home for wild life. "Without our forests, Alberta would be a desert," the minister states.

The booklet has been prepared to give Alberta citizens and school children authentic and accurate information on forestry in Alberta. The conservation policies and practices of the Alberta Forestry Service are outlined and other chapters deal with the economic importance of forests, fire and insect damage and conservation and reforestation.

The last pages deal with the species of trees growing in Alberta and include a map of forest areas. Copies of the booklet may be obtained from the Department of Land and Forests, Administration Building, Edmonton.

PROTECTION FROM AN ATOM BOMB KEY TO CIVIL DEFENCE PROGRAM

Are we absolutely helpless or can we really be protected from an atomic bomb attack?

We are by no means helpless and we most certainly can protect ourselves. This protection is the keystone of our civil defence program.

If the people of Alberta will carefully read, preserve and be guided by information contained in the pamphlet "Personal Protection Under Atomic Attack," our casualties will be materially reduced, possibly as much as 50 per cent.

If men and women will enlist in their local civil defence organization as required, and if they will follow civil defence instructions, our casualties and property damage will be lessened.

If there is at least one first aider in every home and if every family has its individual plan of defence predicted on official advice and their own common sense, death and destruction will be kept to an absolute minimum.

Fall Supper, Bazaar Held

The W.A. of Zion United church held their annual Fall Supper and Bazaar in the church on Thursday evening, November 15.

This event was extremely successful and the ladies are most grateful to the residents of the community and surrounding district for their patronage.

Due to the unexpectedly large crowd in attendance, there was some slight delay in seating and to those who were inconvenienced on this account, the ladies offer their sincere regrets.

A short but excellent musical program followed the supper, featuring readings, vocal and instrumental numbers.

The first canal connecting Lake Fur Company. It was a nine-foot Superior and Lake Huron was lock, only large enough for built in 1797 by the Northwest canoe.

Poor Appearance of Registered Seed

Almost all Registered seed will be of poor appearance this year, but seed quality has nothing to do with appearance. Registered seed of poor appearance still contains all the essential qualities, is of high germination, so will produce a good true-to-variety crop.

Resources May Make Alberta Tax Free

Premier Manning said recently at a meeting of Alberta Association of Municipal Districts, that it was "not at all beyond the realms of possibility" that Alberta would not only be the only debt free province, but the only tax free province in Canada.

The premier pointed out that oil revenue alone in the last 3 1/2 years had poured $110,000,000 into the treasury and added that should the present rate of acceleration continue, a tax free Alberta is not too visionary.

Mr. Manning outlined a plan to rebuild the Municipal system, which would include the consideration of size, population and industry, and assured financial stability in forming the District. He added that the Province will pay about $25,750,000 in grants to municipalities and schools this year, and that this must be substantially increased.

Mr. Manning stated that it was not only a few small groups that benefited from Alberta's oil revenue, but also all citizens as it allows the province to undertake more aid to schools and municipalities without an increase in taxes.

CROSSFIELD—John Goettler of Crossfield is one of twenty-one Canadian airmen who left Dorval Airport in Quebec last week, in an Air Transport Command aircraft bound for the United Kingdom.

New England has 2,631 turkey farms. The annual retail value of their turkey crop is more than $10,000,000.

Edmonton Scientists Cure Barley Smut, Tackle Butter Canning

An inexpensive, simple control for barley smut was discovered recently in Edmonton by Dr. L. E. Tyner, plant pathologist with the Canada Department of Agriculture.

The chemical treatment, if used by all prairie barley producers, could save millions of bushels of barley from loss.

The chemical, which has been under test at Edmonton, Saskatoon, and Winnipeg experimental laboratories, has been found almost 100 per cent efficient. Only in one case did the treatment fail to remove all traces of smut, 0.2 per cent remained.

Treatment with the new discovery requires that seed barley be soaked 10 hours in water, and then for 48 hours in a two per cent solution of the chemical. The water-soaking is done to soften the kernel and allows the chemical to penetrate into the embryo where the smut grows.

Dr. Tyner estimates that the cost of treatment will be about 20 cents a bushel, as compared to the only alternative method, which costs usually over $1.00 a bushel.

The old method, which will be made obsolete by Dr. Tyner's discovery, was performed with a centrally located treating machine, and involved delicate control of time and temperature.

Dr. Tyner's method can be performed in a barrel.

Besides Montcalm barley in his experiments, Dr. Tyner used Newal, Titan, Plush and Glacier varieties. The treatment was equally effective with all types.

Another Edmonton man, F. W. Wood, of the University of Alberta, is seeking a method of packaging butter for shipment to distant points. Needs of northern travellers, and the navy, army and airforce have rivetted attention to the problem, and the Dominion government has given the university a grant to pay the costs of research.

A method of canning butter has for some time been used in northern areas by trappers and prospectors, and more recently by the armed forces.

However, too few people realized that canning butter does not protect it from the growth of MAXWELL COHEN, of Boston, Mass., past national commander of Jewish Veterans of America, who will meet with the Jewish community of Edmonton during a visit here Nov. 21.

At the annual election of the lord mayor of the City of London, sweet-smelling flowers and herbs are scattered over the platform. The practice is a relic of medieval precautions once taken against the plague.

micro-organisms as in the case of other foods. Sterilization and other processes that are used in preserving most canned goods cannot be applied to butter.

"Although we have conducted our research for only five months," stated Mr. Wood, who is assistant professor of dairying at the university, "it does seem likely that a satisfactory method can be found for preserving butter by means of a canning process."

Normally, canned butter will remain in a palatable state as long as 30 days, but it shows a pronounced tendency to deteriorate when subjected to extreme temperatures, such as in the tropics. Principal defects were, rancidity due to bacterial and oxidative causes, and an objectional physical condition caused by melting.

The Lighter Side

A Doctor's Dilemma

A new doctor was the only one available when Mr. Kelly's wife was taken ill. Called to the Kelly home, he went upstairs to the sick room but came down in a few minutes to inquire, "Have you got a corkscrew?" He took the instrument and went upstairs for the second time.

Several minutes later he was back again. "Got a screwdriver?" he asked the anxious Kelly. Instrument in hand, he went upstairs again.

Almost immediately he was back. "A chisel and mallet, quickly," he demanded.

The distraught husband could stand it no longer. "For Heaven's sake, doctor," he begged, "what's the matter with my wife?"

"Don't know yet," was the reply; "can't get my medicine bag open."

presents and publicity; and when they die, their wives get the insurance and the winters in Florida.

By Himself

The class had been given a rather difficult sum to do for homework and, strange to relate, Tommy, the dunce of the class, was the only one with the correct answer.

"Did your brother help you with this, Tommy?" asked the teacher. "No, ma'am," replied Tommy truthfully. "He did it alone."

Now She Knows

"Is this the speedometer?" asked the pretty girl, tapping the glass with her finger.

"Yes, dear," he replied.

"And that's the clutch?"

"That's the clutch, darling," he said, jamming on his brakes to avoid a fast approaching truck.

"But what on earth is this?" she inquired at the same time giving the accelerator a vigorous push with her foot.

"This, dear," he said, in a soft celestial voice, "is Heaven." And picking up a harp he flew away.

Letter to Louisa
Dear Louisa,—
I am thirty years old and plan to be married this winter. My fiancée is a widower without children.
Now my problem is this, I have been working for ten years and like my work. I plan to keep my job, although this is not necessary from a financial standpoint. My fiancée does not object except for the reason that his business is fifty miles away, which means a long ride each day or being away from home a part of each week.

Do you think we will have as great a chance for happiness with this arrangement or should I give up my job? I am afraid I shall be bored with nothing to do.
M. Y. L.
Answer:
I think you will have a greater chance for happiness if you give up your job and go with your husband. As for not having anything to do, I am sure that you will find much more to do than you realize if you try to make a pleasant home for your husband to come to after his day's work.
Since you say that finances do not enter into the picture, there in their mates. There is much less ties to engage in if you do find time hanging heavy on your hands.
Another thing is that time is running out if you plan to have a family and no woman, unless she is obliged to, should leave her small children all day with paid workers.

Couple To Reside In Calgary

BEISEKER—Angela Matilda, third eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anselm Schmalz of Beiseker, became the bride of Ivo Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stinn, of Rockyford, at a ceremony held in St. Mary's Church, Beiseker, on Nov. 18, at 10 a.m., with Rev. Father A. E. Tennent officiating.

The church was tastefully decorated with white mums and pink carnations for the single ring ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The bride was lovely in white net over satin, a lace bodice with a yoke of net, buttoning down the back and featuring lily point sleeves. Her floor length veil fell from a coronet of pearls and rhinestone.

The bride was attended by Frances Plante and Loreen Stinn, wearing pale green over taffeta and lilac taffeta, respectively. Shirley Clarkie was flower girl and Douglas Schmalz was train bearer. Shirley wore a yellow satin gown.

The groom was attended by his brother, Bernard, and by the bride's brother, Daniel.

The music was supplied by Mrs. Lou Brosteaux, with selections by the choir.

The wedding reception was held in Beiseker Memorial Hall. The bride's table was decorated with baby mums and pink carnations, and centered with three-tiered wedding cake.

Receiving were the bride's mother and the groom's mother. The bride's mother wore an iron gray dress and the groom's mother was dressed in navy. Each wore a corsage of roses.

A toast was given to the bride by the Rev. Father Tennent. Louis Schmalz, uncle of the bride, acted as toast master.

The couple left on a wedding trip to Banff. The bride and groom each wore a blue suit and the bride wore navy accessories.

On their return from their honeymoon, the couple will reside in Calgary.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. John Clarkie, her son and daughter, Johnny and Donna of Calgary, and Stephen Zerr, Regina, cousin of the bride.

Family Supper Held

The family supper sponsored by the Kathryn Home and School Association was an overwhelming success. The large crowd well represented the seven school districts comprising the association.

Following supper a short address was given by Mr. G. Boyak, and by Mr. D. Gardner, secretary of Conrich Municipal District, on the proposed new Health Unit. Mr. L. Workman then showed several films.
